

ABSTRACT

The present invention provides a cemented optical element which is manufactured by bonding a plurality of optical elements and which has improved thermal characteristics and can be easily manufactured. The cemented optical element comprises optical materials consisting of inorganic material(s) such as optical glass which are bonded to each other via a cementing layer, wherein the cementing layer is made of polysilane.